

CAMOUFLAGE, WHICH CUN- NINGLY FOOLS THE ENEMY'S AIRMEN

A leafy curtain that cleverly simulates a hedge and shuts off the view of a crossroad.

A screen of foliage which hides a great French siege gun on the western front.

Where a cloak of evergreens conceals the trenches of Russian soldiers.

Above—Not a return from a picnic, but a dress of boughs to deceive the enemy's gunners.

To left—A barrack building disguised by a picture of barnyard domesticity.

Above — Innocent looking from aloft. It shelters, however, a deadly 75-millimeter battery.
Photo from National Press.

To left—An anti-aircraft gun in ambush beneath a roof that blends into the landscape.

Suspended cloths and nets that help to conceal a strategic road running into a French village.

A bridge on a military highway. The camouflage of saplings veils this from the enemy aviators.

Photos from Brown Bros.